

I have been a Social worker for 25 years in a range of senior clinical, education and leadership roles mainly in public mainstream and mental health organisations. My career began in social work roles across acute hospitals, addiction, community mental health, and aged care services across Melbourne. I bring expertise in practice advancement, stakeholder engagement, knowledge translation, education and training. I aim to work collaboratively with the AASW, members, practitioners, governments, community services, peak bodies and universities to address current challenges facing the social work profession, promote transparency, and support meaningful, sustainable change.
